

Bali daze

It's a little known secret that when I worked as a flight attendant on All Asia Airways, I would frequently spend my shore leave on the island of Bali. Now Anna and Peter plan to go there too!

1 Exploring Bali

From Kuta, to Sanur, to Nusa Dua, to Kintamani and Singaraja, I've explored every inch of this Pulau Dewata (Island of the Gods) as the locals call it. I've been mobbed by street sellers; I've haggled for singlets, T-shirts and sarongs; I've had my antenna plaited and I've been massaged on Kuta Beach. It is no surprise that Anna, Peter and their parents plan to take a break from the hustle and bustle of Jakarta and spend six days in Bali. I have helped them plan the perfect itinerary.

2 Tourism in Bali

In 2009, according to Indonesia's Badan Pusat Statistik (Central Statistics Body), 584,437 Australians visited Bali, making Indonesia Australia's second-most popular tourist destination after New Zealand.

According to the Australian Bureau of Statistics, Australia's population in June 2009 was 21,874,500, which means that 2.67 per cent of Australia's population visited Bali in that year.

Almost three in every hundred Australians visit Bali each year. These are incredible figures!

Exercise 1

As you can see, after the first two days Zak has left several gaps in the itinerary to allow the Smart family to make their own plans around the core activities he has planned for them each day. Anna and Peter are busy doing some online research about Bali's tourist attractions to help fill any gaps in the itinerary.

Complete the itinerary for the final four days based on Anna and Peter's research.

Remember that items in an itinerary are expressed in short phrases containing the main verb and an object. The subject is usually omitted.

Hint! You may like to do some online research about Bali to complete this exercise.
