

Formal and informal words for 'You'

Answers

1.

Anda	Kamu	Bapak/Ibu	Pak (name) / Bu(name)
a male friend from your father's workplace whom you have not met before	your younger brother or sister	your mother	a male friend from your father's workplace whom you have not met before your classmate	a male friend from your father's workplace whom you have not met before your cat	a shopkeeper whose name you know	a shopkeeper whose name you know the customs officer in the airport	a best friend	the customs officer in the airport	your teacher your teacher	your next door neighbour who is the same age as your parents your next door neighbour who is the same age as your parents

2.

Sample answers:

I put 'a male friend from your father's workplace' in the first and third columns because I would need to show respect to this person. I also put him in the last column because I would probably learn his name when we meet so I could use the shortened title with his name and still be respectful.

I put the customs officer in the first and third column because I wouldn't know his or her name but I would still need to show respect. So in this case, Anda and Bapak/Ibu are appropriate.

I put 'a shopkeeper whose name you know' in both the third and fourth column because it is very respectful to use Ibu/Bapak but if we know the person's name, it is also perfectly acceptable to use Bu (name) / Pak (name).

I put 'our teacher' in the third and fourth column because both Bapak/Ibu and Pak (name) / Bu (name) are acceptable to show respect.

I must show the same level of respect for a next door neighbour who is the same age as my parents as I do for my teacher. I put this person in the third and fourth column because both Bapak/Ibu and Pak (name) / Bu (name) are acceptable to show respect.