

Gardens: Important to Javanese wildlife

Lowland forests are the richest habitat for Javanese fauna & flora. Unfortunately, no natural areas of lowland forest or wild rivers remain in Java.

Java is very rich in wildlife, with the number of species in the following groups: native plants (4,500); mammals (137); birds (430); and snakes (87).

Javanese village gardens are traditionally rich in wildlife: 351 village gardens in West Java had a cumulative total of 602 plant species. And one village had 78 species of birds belonging to 38 families, including 13 species that are legally protected.

Hills Joglo Villa was all padi 16 years ago- with only one tree. At that time it had 5 bird and 10 snake species. Now there are 45 and 22 species, respectively.

Gardens: Important to Javanese wildlife

Lowland forests are the richest habitat for Javanese fauna & flora. Unfortunately, no natural areas of lowland forest or wild rivers remain in Java.

Java is very rich in wildlife, with the number of species in the following groups: native plants (4,500); mammals (137); birds (430); and snakes (87).

Javanese village gardens are traditionally rich in wildlife: 351 village gardens in West Java had a cumulative total of 602 plant species. And one village had 78 species of birds belonging to 38 families, including 13 species that are legally protected.

Hills Joglo Villa was all padi 16 years ago- with only one tree. At that time it had 5 bird and 10 snake species. Now there are 45 and 22 species, respectively.

Gardens: Important to Javanese wildlife

Lowland forests are the richest habitat for Javanese fauna & flora. Unfortunately, no natural areas of lowland forest or wild rivers remain in Java.

Java is very rich in wildlife, with the number of species in the following groups: native plants (4,500); mammals (137); birds (430); and snakes (87).

Javanese village gardens are traditionally rich in wildlife: 351 village gardens in West Java had a cumulative total of 602 plant species. And one village had 78 species of birds belonging to 38 families, including 13 species that are legally protected.

Hills Joglo Villa was all padi 16 years ago- with only one tree. At that time it had 5 bird and 10 snake species. Now there are 45 and 22 species, respectively.